DETAILED ACTION

Pertinent Art Cited

The following US Patent Applications reveal the current state of the art:

Anderson et al. (US 2003/0184285) teaches a position sensor for sensing the position of an object (Fig. 3) having an associated magnetic field comprising: a first magnetic field sensing device (R_x) at a first position that outputs a first signal related to the magnetic field at the first position; a second magnetic field sensing device (R_y) at a second position that outputs a second signal related to the magnetic field at the second position (Paragraph 55, lines 1-5); a processor (100, cpu unit perform signal processing) to derive from the first signal and the second signal the most likely position of the position sensor relative to the object (Paragraph 56, lines 12-15; Paragraph 32, page 4, lines 3-8), wherein the processor comprises: a first calibrator (10a; calibration coil) to calibrate the first magnetic field sensing device (Paragraph 55, lines 5-11), thereby deriving a first measured magnetic field; a second calibrator to calibrate the second magnetic field sensing device, thereby deriving a second measured magnetic field (Paragraph 55, lines 7-11; each sensing signals are measured through calibration coil); a mathematical model (mutual inductance matrix) to determine a predicted (estimated) magnetic field at a given position relative to the object (Paragraph 57, page 7, lines 1-7); an estimator algorithm (first-order or least square algorithm) to compare the predicted magnetic field with the first and second measured magnetic fields, thereby calculating the most likely position of the position sensor relative to the object (Paragraph 78).

However, Anderson does not teach of methods that direct to determining a drilling location on a wing skin comprising at least the steps of: locating a position sensor on the wing skin, the position sensor comprising first and second magnetic field sensing devices, said first magnetic field sensing device located at a first position and the second magnetic field sensing device located at a second position, said second position different from said first position.

Allowable Subject Matter

Claims 17-20 and 22-27 are allowed.

The following is a statement of reasons for the indication of allowable subject matter:

The primary reason for the allowance of claim 22 is the inclusion of the limitation "determining a drilling location on a wing skin comprising at least the steps of: locating a position sensor on the wing skin, the position sensor comprising first and second magnetic field sensing devices, said first magnetic field sensing device located at a first position and the second magnetic field sensing device located at a second position, said second position different from said first position". The prior art of record, taken alone or in combination, fails to disclose or render obvious.

Claims 17-20 and 23-27 are allowed due to their dependency on claim 22.

Any comments considered necessary by applicant must be submitted no later than the payment of the issue fee and, to avoid processing delays, should preferably accompany the issue fee. Such submissions should be clearly labeled "Comments on Statement of Reasons for Allowance."
